1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 8/29/05 has been entered.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-5, 8-14, 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Denesuk et al, U.S. Patent NO. 6,196,156 in view of Jordan, U.S. Patent No. 5,226,384. Denesuk et al discloses an article for use by pets comprising a core which may comprise foam or other types of fillers such as synthetic and natural fibers, (col. 10, lines 28-41) and a fabric cover. The fabric cover may comprise two different types of fabric and each type of fabric only partially covers the core. See col. 10, line 60 – col. 11, line 7 and col. 11, lines 38-46 as well as example 4. Suitable fabrics include polyolefins, acetate, acrylic, nylons and polyesters. See col. 11, line 65 – col. 12, line 4. The fabrics can be woven, non-woven or knitted. See col. 9, lines 31-43. Denesuk differs from the claimed invention because Denesuk does not teach that at least one of the fibers should be a high strength fiber. Jordan teaches that high strength fibers such as aramid fibers can be used in forming covers for articles used by pets. See abstract.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to have employed high strength fibers for parts of the cover of Denesuk which would be most exposed to wear and tear, biting, chewing, etc., motivated by the expectation that this would enhance the durability of the bed.

4. Applicant's arguments filed 8/29/05 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues that Denesuk is not concerned with preventing tearing, but rather with forming the material of a non-toxic material so that when it is torn it would not harm the animal because Denesuk is not concerned with forming a durable pet bed. However, Denesuk clearly is concerned with forming a durable bed since Denesuk teaches applying antimicrobial agents to the materials making up the beds in order to guard against physical and chemical degradation of the materials in order to form an article having a longer useful life. See col. 4, lines 1-8. Further, the non-toxic materials referred to at col. 8 are not the fabric components of the bedding but rather the anti-microbial coating which is applied to the fabric. Thus, Denesuk is not teaching forming a bed for a pet to eat, but is rather teaching that when applying an anti-microbial composition in order to enhance the useful life of the bed that is important for the anti-microbial composition to be non-toxic since animals tend to chew on bedding articles. The teachings of Denesuk are therefore readily combinable with the teachings of Jordan of employing high strength fibers in forming covers for use by pets, since Jordan teaches a way of further enhancing the useful lifetime of a pet bedding article by employing high strength fabrics as covers. Therefore, the rejection is maintained.

5. With regard to the 112 1st paragraph rejections set forth in the previous rejection, Applicant's arguments are persuasive and that rejection is withdrawn.
